Community Development Partnership welcomes Nina Cantor as new Chief Development and Communications Officer

The Community Development Partnership (CDP) is pleased to announce that Nina Cantor has joined the staff as its Chief Development & Communications Officer.

The Chief Development & Communications Officer is responsible for ensuring achievement of the organization's fundraising and communication goals through collaboration, strategy, planning and execution.

Cantor has been living and working in Provincetown for the last 4 years using her extensive marketing and communications background to invigorate the Town of Provincetown's Office of Tourism. Cantor has served in numerous fundraising and communications positions for more than a dozen years, working for several non-profit organizations while living in New Jersey. Her extensive knowledge of marketing and communications strategy as well as her skills as a fundraiser will be critical in building support for the CDP across the Lower and Outer Cape.

"We are thrilled to welcome Nina and her incredible energy and expertise to the CDP," commented Coburn. "She is the right person to help us build support and the resources we need for the future. I am excited to have her on our team."

Cantor is also active in the local community. Since 2018 she has served as the Co-Chair of the fundraising committee for the Unitarian Universalist Meeting House of Provincetown.

Cantor began her position with the organization on July 26, 2021. Cantor succeeds Britt Beedenbender who has filled the role for the past four years, and is leaving to take on a new career challenge.
